

The John M. Langston Bar Association Hosts MCLE Seminar in Association with Digital Evidence Legal Video Services

Los Angeles, California – May 2, 2008

The John M. Langston Bar Association hosted a 1-Hour MCLE seminar on May 2, 2008 featuring, Digital Evidence Legal Video Services' CEO, Michael L. Jones.

The lunchtime seminar entitled, "Discovery in the High-Tech Legal Arena" was held at the law offices of Waller, Lansden Dortch & Davis, LLP, and focused on video depositions.

Mr. Jones covered sections of the California Rules of Evidence and Civil Procedure, and topics such as; common and costly mistakes to avoid during video depositions, identifying positive and negative bias, how the attorney and client's credibility are compromised during video depositions, and effective witness preparation for video depositions.

Jones' tech-savvy legal video and litigation support firm is certified by the State Bar of California as a Provider of Approved MCLE credited activity.

Mr. Jones said, "We had a very diverse group of litigator's at the seminar today. The participants included experienced trial lawyers, new associates, attorneys with vast knowledge of video depositions, and attorneys with no experience conducting a video deposition."

At the conclusion of the MCLE event, 99.5% of the seminar participants gave Mr. Jones the highest rating possible in every category listed on the State Bar's activity evaluation form. The participants said the live presentation, along with the audio and video illustrations showcased during the seminar were beneficial to their overall understanding of the high-tech proceedings.

"Moreover, what was most refreshing was listening to the experienced litigators convey how much they learned during our seminar. Upon conclusion of the seminar, the experienced counselor's openly admitted that prior to attending our seminar, they were unaware of most of the controversial tactics employed by opposing counsel during video depositions," Jones continued.

The majority of the new associates said the information contained in the curriculum was extremely relevant and provided valuable insight into preparation for and conducting video depositions.

Mr. Jones commented, "As a provider of continuing legal education, I am grateful and excited to know that the participants viewed their experience during our seminar as time well spent. Their feedback gives credibility to the value of the curriculum offered by our firm."

"I want to thank attorney Latrice George and the John M. Langston Bar Association for hosting the event and contributing to the overall success of the seminar," Mr. Jones concluded.

Digital Evidence' MCLE seminars entitled; "The High-Tech Universe of Litigation," and "Discovery in the High-Tech Legal Arena," are designed to advance the participants comprehension relative to the strategic applications of audio and video evidence and admissibility protocols.
